The recommendations deliberately limit the number and quantity of drugs to be available to an essential minimum. Additional drugs should be made available only where the diver medic (the suitable person) has been trained in their administration and following consultation with a supervising doctor. In many circumstances, it may be possible to arrange for access to drugs kept nearby for another purpose (e.g. in an offshore installation sick bay). Arrangements may also be made with a doctor to pre-position drugs and equipment to be used by that doctor when visiting the site of the diving operation.
